Styles of Teachers

Choosing Curriculum – Teaching Methodologies

I. Traditional Textbook Approach

A. Characteristics

1. instructor-driven
2. text-based
3. reading material followed by questions

B. Advantages

1. less planning on teacher's part
2. easy to chart scores
3. contains built-in tests

C. Considerations

1. less freedom
2. less depth
3. student often becomes bored
4. student who does not fit the curriculum will feel inferior
5. student simply masters tests rather than material

II. Unit Studies Approach

A. Characteristics

1. most subjects are covered by studying one topic
2. study material usually comes from reading books
3. usually includes hands-on activities

B. Advantages

1. allows depth of study and greater understanding of topic
2. children retain what they have learned
3. useful for teaching multiple grade levels

C. Considerations

1. more planning required of teacher
2. harder to track accomplishments
3. more uncertainty about covering all subjects

III. Living Books Approach

A. Characteristics

1. study material comes from “real” books, rather than textbooks

2. various subjects are integrated into reading, but not necessarily as purposefully as in unit studies

B. Advantages

1. students are reading books by someone who is passionate about a subject
2. learning is low-key because it comes as a natural process of simply reading a good book
3. allows exploration of a subject

C. Considerations

1. not all subjects are covered at all times
2. very difficult to track work because very little is written
3. hard to follow a traditional scope and sequence

IV. Classical Approach

A. Characteristics

1. teaches the trivium
 - a. grammar stage
 - b. dialectic or logic stage
 - c. rhetoric stage
2. rigorous academics
3. strong reading program

B. Advantages

1. follows stages of mental development
2. develops independent learners
3. teaches thinking skills

C. Considerations

1. very little prepared curriculum available
2. overemphasis on ancient disciplines and classics

V. Unschooling Approach

A. Characteristics

1. assumes children have an innate desire to learn
2. follows child's natural curiosity
3. less structured approach

B. Advantages

1. requires little planning

2. children are less likely to suffer from burnout
3. creates self-learners

C. Considerations

1. hard to assess level of learning
2. neglects some subjects or areas of learning
3. children may not accomplish as much as parent anticipates
